S.W. ring-road deal passes: Sources

Historic approval. 70 per cent approval among Tsuu T'ina members

JEREMY NOLAÏS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Tsuu T'ina Nation band members voted in favour of running the final leg of Calgary's ring road through their lands Thursday.

Sources confirmed in the hours after the vote that the deal had been overwhelmingly approved. The Alberta government and Nation had been tight-lipped about specifics on the agreement.

A press conference is scheduled by Alberta Transportation for 4 p.m. Friday, spokesperson Parker Hogan confirmed, and it's expected Tsuu T'ina will call one around noon.

Word of the vote, which sources said saw 644 members vote in favour, to 280 against, worked its way through social media just over an hour after polls closed Thursday around 8 p.m.

"It's obviously devastating, not just for my family but others," said Cory Cardinal, as he scrolled through Facebook posts of people reacting to the approval.

Cardinal did not vote Thursday but his family home is expected to be in the path of the road, which has been tied up in negotiations for more than four decades.

Tricia Crowchild, a Tsuu T'ina voting member who lives in Calgary, was brought to tears as she learned of the results Thursday evening.

"There is no way Canadians would ever be OK with digging up dead presidents to pave over them," she said, referring to burial grounds also believed to be in the path of the road.

Nation members have declined to offer details of the deal, which first surfaced in local media last month.

The vote marked the second time in four years the Alberta government has sought approval to run a massive thoroughfare through nation lands.

Sixty per cent of voting band members rejected a 2009 ring road proposal. That deal would have seen the band sell 400 hectares of reserve land for $275 million and the possibility on 2,000 hectares on the reserve's west side with a minimum of $240 million held in trust.

Investigation

Fire victim might have been sexually assaulted: Police

Investigators spent Thursday interrogating a suspect in an alleged sexual attack on a woman who also suffered fire-related injuries at her Sunnyside home.

Police said the woman was found with second- and third-degree burns and smoke inhalation as the result of a "man-made fire" in the 800 block of 9A Street NW on Oct. 3.

A larger investigation was launched after the results of medical testing revealed the depth of the woman's injuries, police said.

Staff Sgt. Mark Hatchette labelled it a "complex case," and the link between the fire and the possible attack remained unclear at a press briefing.

Hatchette did confirm the victim, a woman in her 50s, and the suspect knew each other, but they were not romantically linked.

"They knew of each other for a very short time," said Hatchette, who works in the sex-crimes unit.

No charges have been laid.

Investigators were able to speak to the woman, who is recovering from her injuries.

"Our victim has been through a life-changing event — a serious, traumatic incident," Hatchette told reporters at police headquarters.

Police reported the woman was found in her basement suite, but Hatchette would not comment on whether she was physically restrained.

"We're still looking into all possibilities in regard to the arson and her being found inside the building at the time of the fire," he said. BRYAN WEISMILLER/METRO

Class-size strain being felt: Principal

Centennial. Data give insight on struggles facing CBE high schools

JEREMY NOLAÏS

By Matt Christison's count, he has 140 more students than he did five years ago, and 10 fewer staff.

The Centennial High School principal has been forced to cope this year specifically with 24 more students but 10 fewer teachers and about 2.4 fewer support staff.

"The biggest thing is when you have fewer human beings working with students, you will obviously have less contact and some of the people, who are no longer on staff, they would be a really good match for individual students," he said Thursday. "That's one of the biggest pressures and then the other is, with fewer staff... there are fewer opportunities when we build the timetable to offer as many courses as possible."

Metro obtained the data set created by Christison and presented to the school's parent council and then approached him to discuss the inner workings of city high schools, which the Calgary Board of Education has admitted were hit hardest during spring budget planning.

The board says the cut was 4.5 per cent to schools unless enrolment declined, but others have offered differing figures, including some as deep as 11 per cent.

Centennial currently has two core classes with 41 students in them, another four with 40 and eight more with 39, according to Christison's count.

There are other options and advanced-placement classes with even more students, but CBE officials have pointed out that can be done intentionally in certain cases.

For the second semester, Christison has projected 10 classes with 40 or more students and another 13 with 39, but both he and board officials cautioned Thursday that is only "raw data" and student timetables still need to be hammered down in the weeks ahead.

The board has faced heated criticism from the Alberta Teachers' Association in recent weeks amid claims that "40 is the new 30" when it comes to high-school class sizes.

S.W. ring road doesn't solve all commuter struggles: Councillor

Calgary's southwest leg of the ring road is a "godsend" to some travellers, but it's not the only project needed to improve traffic flow in the area, cautions a councillor.

Tsui T'ina Nation members voted Thursday to greenlight the major thoroughfare through their lands in exchange for compensation and a transfer of other land.

But Ward 11 Coun. Brian Pincott said he will still be pushing heavily for the development of the interchange at Glenmore Trail and 37th Street S.W., noting traffic flow to the Grey Eagle Casino on Tsui T'ina as well as a planned concert hall and hotel currently under construction was always meant to come from the west.

"For somebody who lives south of the (Glenmore) Reservoir, the ring road is not their solution... At the city, our financial focus, our social focus, our environmental focus is not on building big, massive highways to move people around," Pincott said. "We actually have transit at the top of the list."

Pincott said Thursday's verdict gave the city "certainty" so it could move on with its own projects.

But the struggle to find an appropriate route for the final ring-road leg has had an impact far beyond city planners.

Michael Gibney and his family were among those that rallied to save Glenmore Park as other options were explored for the thoroughfare. He said the ongoing negotiations have affected property values and family plans for many in his southwest community of Lakeview.

"I've only lived in Lakeview 17 years; I know some people that have been here 40 years," said Gibney. "And every three years it comes up and it never seems to have an answer. For them to resolve this would be great."

Industrial heartland. Province, industry defend air quality

The Alberta government and an industry spokesman are reassuring residents downwind of a sprawling petrochemical complex northeast of Edmonton that the air is safe despite research that says it contains dangerous levels of pollutants.

"We're fairly confident that the data we've seen from monitoring the area demonstrates the air quality in the region is meeting acceptable standards," said Neil Shelly of the Heartland Industrial Association, which represents 40 companies clustered in the 800-square-kilometre region.

An Alberta Environment spokeswoman said the air is closely monitored by a local agency and cases where guidelines for toxic chemicals are exceeded are extremely rare.

Nikki Booth said that levels of benzene — a known carcinogen — only exceeded one-hour guidelines once in 2012 and not at all in 2011.

But a woman who helped conduct the research points out that her Nobel-Prize-winning lab has been to the region three times between 2008 and 2012 and recorded similar results each visit.

University of California scientist Isobel Simpson, co-author of a paper released Wednesday, concluded air downwind from what is called the Industrial Heartland contains pollutants at levels equal to some of the world's largest cities. Other pollutants, including some known to cause cancer, also measured well above background levels.

Although the paper doesn't draw a cause-and-effect relationship, the research found rates of cancers linked to those chemicals were higher in communities closest to the stacks.

Climate change. NDP puts heat on Danielle Smith over her opinions

Alberta Opposition Wildrose Leader Danielle Smith is coming under fire for refusing to say whether she believes climate change exists.

NDP Leader Brian Mason says Smith is being "weaselly" by refusing to say whether she believes in the science of greenhouse gas emissions but at the same time promising action to combat it.

Smith told reporters this week that her party is looking to pass resolutions at its weekend convention to fight climate change, but declined to say what her personal opinion is on the matter.

Smith said she is "not a scientist" but said clearly the international community expects the province to take action to fight climate change.

Air ambulance. Retractable wheels allow the helicopter to taxi on the ground while still flying aerodynamically

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

STARS air ambulance unveiled a newer, bigger, faster helicopter Thursday that will soon provide emergency medical service in the Calgary area.

"The only reason we go after technology that can fly faster, further, all of that awesome stuff, is so that we can provide better care," STARS CEO Andrea Robertson said at a ceremony introducing the new aircraft.

The AW139 helicopter is nearly 17 metres long, weighs close to 7,000 kilograms, and can fly up to 300 km/h.

Its eight cubic metres of cabin space also provides enough room to comfortably fit two patients and three medical staff behind the cockpit, said STARS technology and logistics manager Dave Harris. That's a major improvement from the old BK117 helicopters.

"We'd typically have to download a lot of gear to carry

In numbers

$16.2M

Cost of the AW139: $14.2 million for the aircraft and $2 million for the medical interior

two patients," Harris said.

Pilot Mike Potter said the AW139 is also designed to handle Alberta's winters and is capable of safely flying in adverse weather conditions, including freezing rain, thanks to an anti-icing system.

"The blades themselves heat up with an algorithm that the helicopter calculates — both the main rotor blades and tail rotor blades," Potter said.

A "digital suite" in the cockpit including a "four-axis autopilot" allows the aircraft to hover independently, Potter added.

An AW139 was introduced to the Edmonton STARS fleet in December 2012 and the Calgary helicopter should be in full service by early 2014, Robertson said.

The purchase of both helicopters was made possible by $26.5 million generated in STARS' largest fundraising campaign to date.

"The success of the campaign is a direct result of the incredible generosity and the community spirit of all Albertans," campaign chair Craig Stewart said.

Woolley on the hook for 'graffiti' cleanup

Bylaw order. Ward 8 team could be hit with fines days after celebrating election win

JEREMY NOLAÏS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

One of Calgary's newest councillors made his mark on the recent municipal election campaign — maybe a little too well.

Bylaw services confirmed Thursday they have ordered Evan Woolley's campaign to remove spray-chalked messages supporting the candidate in at least 11 city-owned locations.

But Robert Schuett, manager of the Woolley campaign, said there were actually up to 200 messages spread around Ward 8 by his team on election day. Schuett's candidate pulled off what many considered the upset of the election, knocking off area incumbent John Mar.

Schuett said he doesn't see what all the fuss is about.

"It's sidewalk chalk," he said. "I don't know many children playing in the suburbs that call bylaw before they ... write and play hop-scotch on the street."

Images of the pro-Woolley logos have emerged on social media and some criticism has been levelled at the new Ward 8 representative on Twitter and his Facebook page.

"Want to clean up the Beltline? Start with your own mess, mister," wrote Alethea Wiesner.

But Schuett said the criticism was a "social media attack" by hypocrites, adding his team found similar messages supporting Mar and Mayor Naheed Nenshi.

He had received a quote for the cleanup from a professional company, but deemed it too steep for the campaign's budget.

Instead, Schuett said volunteers were going "full gear" to remove the messages and at least 75 per cent had been removed by Thursday afternoon.

Animal and bylaw services manager Kevin Leitch said the campaign has until week's end to remove the messages, but even then fines could be handed out.

"We treat it as graffiti," Leitch said. "We own the property ... we can order that it be cleaned up very quickly."

Spray-chalked messages of support for Ward 8 winner Evan Woolley popped up during his campaign. FACEBOOK

We Day comes

Nelly Furtado, Magic Johnson and Down With Webster rock the Saddledome

BRYAN WEISMILLER

Students were pumped full of can-do spirit Thursday as they watched high-profile philanthropists speak about public service at We Day Alberta.

Medicine Hat teen Elizabeth Ruetch boarded a Calgary-bound school bus at 5:30 a.m., and later arrived at the Saddledome along with more than 16,000 other students.

Ruetch found inspiration in watching award-winning musician Nelly Furtado, as well as a cast of other speakers such as Magic Johnson, Down With Webster and Martin Luther King III. "It makes me feel better about myself coming here and learning more about what we can do to make the world a better place," she said.

The school-day event was the brainchild of the Kielburger brothers, social activists known for founding the Free the Children charity. Craig Kielburger described it as the "Grey Cup or JUNOs of doing good".

"You have to earn your way to being here," he told reporters. "It is free but (students must complete) at least one global, one local service action."

More than 680 schools provincewide reportedly partook in the festivities, about 200 of which participated in post-flood clean up.

Legendary hoops star Magic Johnson drew thunderous applause. "We need to change the world right now by being unselfish," Johnson told the crowd.

University of Calgary student Daniel Mossienko enjoyed the hall of fame point guard's frequent basketball analogies.

"It's unreal," Mossienko said. "I went last year and this year is by far even better."

Controversy. Faculty

University of Calgary officials are looking at the possibility of farming operations and staffing of an international college out to a private corporation, but the institution's faculty association is threatening legal action to prevent the move.

School vice-president and provost Dru Marshall confirmed the idea was being looked at in a statement issued late Thursday, but said the university brass now wants to hear from faculty and students before making any final decisions.

"This consultation period will run until February 2014,

International students

International students attending the University of Calgary pay double — or even triple — the tuition of a typical Canadian student, the school's international vice-provost Janaka Ruwapura said in March.

after which time we will consider the merits of bringing forward a formal proposal to general faculties council and the board of governors," said Marshall, who was travelling and unavailable for an interview.

But the university's faculty association president, Paul Rogers, has issued a letter condemning the idea because it would lead to "outsourcing of academic work from U of C academic staff to a for-profit corporation whose employees would have no collective agreement protection (including academic freedom)."

Reached Thursday, Rogers said the move could damage the U of C's reputation, adding the association's threat of taking the matter to court was very real. He added that he wasn't completely certain of the motive behind the third-party move.

"The only thing I can see is it's a way of increasing the (student) numbers faster than you'd be able to do with an in-house strategy," he said.

It's believed the college would allow international students to take upgrade courses before actually attending the university.

The U of C unveiled an international strategy in March that will see it attempt to double the number of students it admits from abroad in coming years.

Bow Valley. 'Think Outside the Rink,' says new minor hockey campaign

The Bow Valley Hockey Society has announced a new clothing line aimed at promoting positive community values in the face of a "disturbing problem" with Canada's national pastime.

The society has drafted hoodies, T-shirts and long-sleeve shirts emblazoned with "Think Outside the Rink."

"Some people focus on the wins and losses," said Trevor Morgan, Bow Valley's manager of hockey operations.

"Let's focus on what (minor-hockey players) are getting.

"They're getting friendships, they're getting a sense of community, they're building pride."

Earlier this week, Metro reported discriminatory taunting has superseded severe physical violence as the No. 1 cause of indefinite suspension in the minor-league ranks, according to Hockey Calgary.

After reading the article,

Bow Valley official Ryan Carthy wrote an email highlighting the campaign as a "possible solution to what in fact is a disturbing problem."

Funds raised from the campaign go back to the society, which pays dividends to the community. For instance, players raised $9,000 in response to the Calgary floods.

More information can be found on the society's website.

Province to import corneas to clear backlog of patients

The Alberta government says it will start importing corneas from British Columbia and the United States to reduce the wait times for patients awaiting transplants.

Albertans currently spend between two and three years on a waiting list for the vision-restoring procedure.

That's more than twice as long as people in Manitoba and five times longer than those in B.C. Currently, there are about 500 people on the wait list in Alberta.

Ophthalmologist David Climenhaga says over the next 18 months, they will try to get the wait down to about 14 weeks.

A single cornea from the U.S. can cost somewhere between $3,000 and $4,000.

The plan will cost about $1.46 million this year and $1.61 million next year.

The province said the money is already in the Alberta Health Services budget, and it is just being reallocated.

HOW DID WE GO FROM SO UNITED TO SO DIVIDED?

IN DEFENCE OF
Mike Morrison
calgary@metronews.ca

"Is it over? Can I come out yet?"

That's probably what a lot of people were thinking hours after the polls closed and the dust settled on Calgary's most recent municipal election.

A few months ago, the idea of holding an election to essentially re-elect Mayor Naheed Nenshi and many hard-working councillors back to the job may have seemed a foregone conclusion, especially after the flood.

But then, seemingly out of nowhere, just like the rising waters, the tone of the election quickly changed.

Since there wasn't really competition for city hall's top job, our council races got an unprecedented amount of attention.

And thanks to a modern election, featuring hasty tweets, scandalous emails and not one but two grainy videos, many of the people who put their names forward stumbled into the spotlight and their often knee-jerk reactions caused this election to get way nastier than it was ever supposed to be.

After all, it was just a few months ago that we joined together as a city and began to recover from the costliest natural disaster in Canadian history.

But in a growing city, many move on fast, as evidenced by the Ward 8 voters, who decided to throw out John Mar after two terms, a man that many deemed one of the driving forces behind the flood-recovery efforts in his ward.

So, when our new city council meets for the first time next week, what will happen? What effect, if any, will the past few months have on these 15 people working together for the greater good of Calgary?

While the mayor seemed optimistic, minutes after winning with 74 per cent of the vote, I'm nervous about the future of council.

Like a divided family brought together by annual holidays, there will still be handshakes and photo ops, but what happens when it becomes time to, as the mayor hopes, build a better Calgary?

Divisive election

Like a divided family brought together by annual holidays, there will still be handshakes and photo ops, but what happens when it becomes time to, as the mayor hopes, build a better Calgary?

After such a seemingly divisive election, will this city council be able to work together effectively?

It would seem that some have already picked sides, but regardless of who donated to their campaigns or whatever agendas or vendettas new and old councillors alike have, it wasn't money or anything else that won these people a job at city hall, it was the Calgarians who voted for them.

And just in case they forget that, it's now up to us to remind them, as often as we'd like.

Here's to a great four years ... I hope.

Damaged gas line. No injuries reported after condo units evacuated

Calgary firefighters helped evacuate a southwest Calgary complex Thursday after a gas line near the residence was damaged.

Around 11:30 a.m. Thursday, firefighters were called to a building on Hemlock Crescent SW after someone made a 911 call to report the damaged line.

Upon arrival at the scene, firefighters helped people leave from 36 condo units. The gas had been turned off by the time firefighters had arrived, but crews went floor by floor to ventilate and monitor the air quality.

No injuries were reported during the incident and residents have since been allowed back in the building. METRO

Passion lands teen in councillor's seat

Morinville. Barely a year out of high school, Brennan FitzGerald becomes youngest councillor in town's history

Those who know Brennan FitzGerald aren't surprised he's gone into politics. After all, the Morinville, Alta., resident has loved civics and government since his high school days, where he served as president of his student union.

That was about a year ago. Barely a year out of Morinville Community High School, the 19-year-old is taking a seat at town council as the youngest councillor in town history.

"I felt optimistic when I was campaigning," he said. "I think people saw my passion, and they wanted capable, energetic and service-oriented councillors."

New Morinville mayor Lisa Holmes said she's excited to work with FitzGerald and other new faces that will take the town through an economic boom. Just 33 years old herself, Holmes said she sees a lot of herself in FitzGerald.

"I already forget what it's like to be that age, but I remember having that love of politics like he does," she said.

FitzGerald said he looks forward to meeting and working on capital-region initiatives with Edmonton Mayor-elect Don Iveson. "I want to come together for our region — to harness our potential," he said. LUCY HAINES/FOR METRO

Team Next. Calgary gold medallist's next event: Mentoring young athletes

Calgary's Kyle Shewfelt, the only Canadian to win an Olympic gold medal in gymnastics, has joined an illustrious group of athletes who will be mentoring the next generation of high-performance competitors.

"We're each paired with a group of athletes and what our role is, as a mentor, is to share our experiences," Shewfelt said.

The champion gymnast will join the likes of former sprinter Brunie Surin and recently retired decathlete Simon Whitfield as part of CIBC Team Next, an initiative in which the bank will sponsor 67 young athletes with $15,000 in grants over the next three years, in addition to connecting them with mentors.

"It's not just sport-wise, but also life outside of sport — how you deal with the pressures of media, the pressures of school, the nutrition factor, taking good care of yourself, being a good teammate," Shewfelt said.

CIBC chief operating officer Richard Nesbitt said the focus now is helping these young athletes as they prepare for competition at the 2015 Pan Am Games and Parapan Am Games in Toronto.

"Mentorship is absolutely critical for aspiring athletes," Nesbitt said.

Shaw fire. AHS concedes it breached privacy laws to maintain patient care

The province's privacy watchdog has found Alberta Health Services breached two laws in the wake of a telecommunications meltdown sparked by a fire at Shaw's downtown headquarters in July 2012.

The Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner reported Thursday AHS had peeled back one layer of its electronic health-record system and allowed employees to use their personal devices to communicate during the outage.

AHS CEO Duncan Campbell accepted the ruling as "fair" but he contended it was necessary.

"This is all about patient care," he said. "We had to make a choice in very, very difficult circumstances."

"The system went down and we had patient care to deliver. What would you do?"

No data loss was reported as a result.

Abduction case aftershocks

Roma. Negative reporting on minorities has re-emerged via recent cases: Council of Europe's Commissioner for Human Rights

A Roma woman in Bulgaria has undergone DNA testing and faces preliminary charges of child selling as authorities investigate if she is the mother of a young girl found living with an unrelated couple in Greece, authorities said Thursday.

Though the tests have yet to prove Sasha Ruseva, 35, is the biological mother of the girl known as "Maria," the woman's admission that she once left a baby behind in Greece opened her up to a formal investigation.

Ruseva acknowledged to Bulgarian TV that she had been questioned about the girl, believed to be five or six years old, who was found during a raid for drugs and weapons in a Roma camp in central Greece last week. Ruseva said she gave birth to a girl while working as an olive picker in Greece.

The child's case gained global notice.

Ruseva said she wanted the girl back if tests prove she is the girl's mother.

But she denied taking any money for giving up her baby to another Roma family years ago.

The preliminary charges filed against her allow authorities to start an investigation into whether money changed hands for the child.

Greek authorities took custody of "Maria" after a prosecutor present during the camp raid noticed the blond, blue-eyed and pale-skinned girl looked nothing like the couple raising her.

A DNA test confirmed she was not related to them. Ruseva said she recognized the Greek Roma couple in the "Maria" case as the same people with whom she left her child.

Roma people in the spotlight

Child trafficking?

The "Maria" case has spurred concerns about child trafficking within the

Roma community, and cries of racism as well. In an episode apparently inspired by the Greek case, two young blond, blue-eyed children were taken by police in Ireland from their Roma parents, who had different complexions. But the girl and boy were returned to their families Wednesday after DNA tests determined the children were rightfully theirs. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Portugal. Madeleine McCann case reopened

Portugal's public broadcaster says prosecutors are reopening the police investigation into the disappearance of British child Madeleine McCann, after a review of evidence found new leads in the case.

The public prosecutor decided to reopen the case after "new indications" emerged, though the prosecutor gave no details in a report seen on Radiotelevisao Portuguesa.

The case was closed in 2008 because no crime was detected.

The girl vanished during a family vacation in southern Portugal's Algarve region in May 2007, just before her fourth birthday.

A team of detectives from northern Portugal began reviewing the evidence two years ago. British police have also been sifting through the case files and have identified new avenues of investigation.

Anti-government ideology a growing concern

Sovereign citizens?
Libertarian-inspired philosophy said to pose threat to officer and public safety

Training for frontline officers and better information sharing between police and government agencies can help protect law enforcement officials from potentially aggressive "sovereign citizens," says a newly declassified briefing to Canadian police chiefs.

The presentation, prepared for a meeting of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, calls the libertarian-inspired philosophy "a growing concern" that poses a "threat to officer and public safety."

Enforcement agencies are becoming increasingly wary of sovereign citizens, members of the Freeman-on-the-Land movement and other like-minded people who resist police and government authority.

Adherents say they shun violence and merely want to live free of government-imposed shackles.

However, police say those who espouse the ideology have been involved in numerous violent encounters with law enforcement and government employees in the United States and, to a lesser extent, in Canada.

Freemen commonly claim they do not require a driver's licence, insurance or vehicle registration, police say. And advocates frequently assert a right to have weapons for self-protection, among other things.

Spy charges threaten U.S. alliances

Reaction from Europe. Leaders denounce Obama administration over eavesdropping allegations

European leaders united in anger Thursday as they attended a summit overshadowed by reports of widespread U.S. spying on its allies — allegations German Chancellor Angela Merkel said had shattered trust in the Obama administration and undermined the crucial trans-Atlantic relationship.

The latest revelations that the U.S. National Security Agency swept up more than 70 million phone records in France and may have tapped Merkel's own cellphone brought denunciations from the French and German governments.

Merkel's unusually stern remarks as she arrived at the European Union gathering indicated she wasn't placated by a phone conversation she had Wednesday with President Barack Obama, or his personal assurances that the U.S. is not listening in on her calls now.

Other leaders arriving for the 28-nation meeting echoed Merkel's displeasure. Swedish Prime Minister Fredrik Reinfeldt called it "completely unacceptable" for a country to eavesdrop on an allied leader.

Echoing Merkel, Austria's foreign minister, Michael Spindelegger, said, "We need to re-establish with the U.S. a relationship of trust, which has certainly suffered from this."

Lactating mothers aim to set world record in breastfeeding

Filipino mothers breastfed their babies during a mass breastfeeding program organized by the non-government organization Nurturers of the Earth and the city of Marikina to promote lactation by mothers instead of infant formula milk at Marikina, east of Manila, on Thursday. More than 500 lactating mothers took part in the program, which is also being held in other key sites nationwide in an attempt to make it to the Guinness World Record with the "most number of breastfeeding activity simultaneously held in multiple sites." Philippines. President tries to ease quake fears

The Philippine president slept overnight in an army tent to reassure still-jittery residents of a central town devastated by an earthquake this month.

President Benigno Aquino III said he felt a mild aftershock before dawn Thursday and had to wear a jacket to fight off the strong breeze in Bohol province's Loon town.

A magnitude-7.2 temblor on Oct. 15 killed 198 people, including 185 in Bohol, injured hundreds and damaged thousands of houses and old Roman Catholic churches. Many villagers have refused to return home amid continuing aftershocks and rumours of another quake that can cause a tsunami.

Aquino inspected damaged towns and handed food packs to displaced villagers before flying back to Manila on Thursday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Russia. FBI investigates culture-exchange official

Russia on Thursday angrily dismissed espionage accusations against a Russian cultural-exchange official in Washington, saying the U.S. claims were unfounded.

The FBI is looking into whether Yuri Zaytsev, the head of a Russian government-run cultural exchange program, tried to recruit young Americans as intelligence assets, a U.S. intelligence official told The Associated Press.

The official spoke on condition of anonymity because the probe was still underway.

The magazine Mother Jones first reported the story.

The Russian Foreign Ministry said it was "bewildered" by the reports and said the "fabrications they contained had nothing to do with the reality."

Zaytsev dismissed the accusations as an attempt to hurt ties between Moscow and Washington. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

B.C. trailer-park nightmare finally over for one resident

'Overjoyed.' Stephen Chalmers has a new home thanks to donors from across the country

WEBB
Metro in Vancouver

As Stephen Chalmers stepped into his bright, spacious, new 1999 fifth-wheel in Langley, B.C., on Thursday, he went silent and just took it all in.

Then, he burst into tears.

"I live in a palace," he said, his voice quivering with relief after having survived nearly six weeks in a run-down Surrey trailer park without power.

Chalmers, who suffers from multiple mental illnesses including depression, was pushed to his limit when the landlord, K.B. Properties, failed to hire a health-and-safety co-ordinator for the demolition of the neighbouring Beladean Motel.

The demolition crew hit live hydro wires, and ever since then the Beladean Trailer Park has been running on unreliable generators — and even those the landlord failed to provide until the city got involved.

Chalmers wanted to leave, but his leaky 1989 trailer was too old and broken down to be accepted at most other trailer parks.

Realizing how desperate the situation was, his sister, Marilyn Chase, started a crowdfunding campaign on Fundrazr.com with Metro's assistance.

Within five days the campaign hit its goal of $5,000. Metro then partnered with the Stephen Chalmers relaxes in his new 1999 trailer with his dog, Spaghetti, after surviving nearly six weeks in a Surrey, B.C., trailer park with no power.

JENNIFER GAUTHIER/METRO

Travelhome trailer dealership in Langley, plus a very generous anonymous donor who heard Chalmers' story on Classic Rock 101 and offered another $5,000, to buy him a refurbished, family-sized 26-foot trailer.

On Thursday Travelhome staff also surprised Chalmers, who lives on disability, with plenty of home furnishings, such as pots and pans, towels, bedding and gift certificates for groceries.

"I'm overwhelmed, overjoyed, ecstatically happy," Chalmers said, before adding he wanted to send a message to the donors across the country and as far away as Norway who made it all possible.

Chalmers' message to donors

"I don't pass out the word love very often, but the amount of love that you people showed me is overwhelming, and for that I thank you and I love you." Stephen Chalmers

Chalmers has found a new, quiet trailer park to live in, and is thrilled that he will be reunited with his beloved shih tzu, Spaghetti. He has been unable to live with her for the past two years because his old, leaky trailer wasn't safe for her.

"It means that I'm not totally alone," he said. "The love that that dog shows me is absolutely undying and unconditional."

Several local politicians, including two members of provincial parliament and Surrey city councillor Barinder Rasode, showed up to the key handover to wish Chalmers well, and to promise him they will continue to fight for harsher penalties for negligent landlords.

Others still without power

Eight residents with nowhere else to go still live at the Beladean Trailer Park in Surrey, which has been running on generators for nearly six weeks since an inadequately supervised motel demolition knocked the power out on Sept. 14.

- Program manager of emergency shelter Hyland House Peter Fedos conducts homeless outreach in the area on behalf of B.C. Housing.
- He said the city, the Ministry of Social Development, and Options Community Services, of which Hyland House is a part, are in constant contact about the situation.
- "Everyone is trying to ease the stress occurring for the residents at the trailer park," he said.
- "The Hyland House Mobile Outreach team is working with people there to see if we can get them re-housed in collaboration with B.C. Housing and everyone who is at the table supporting us."

Sex-assault claim. Sask. woman who felt ignored by police turns to YouTube

A Saskatoon woman has turned to YouTube to have her voice heard after she says her allegations of sexual assault were dismissed by police.

In a video uploaded to YouTube on Tuesday, 29-year-old Rebecca Campbell levels the accusations against her co-workers at a local restaurant.

Campbell alleges the ordeal began 10 years ago after an acquaintance took advantage of her. "We had been at a party together and at the time I was actually homeless," Campbell told Metro. "He had offered to let me crash on his couch for a couple days, so I left the party with him and he attacked me and raped me."

Although she said she originally went to the police, she feels she was dismissed. A spokesperson for the Saskatoon Police Service, Alyson Edwards, said upon seeing the video, an officer contacted Campbell.

"We wanted to reach out to her right away so we could resolve any issues or concerns that she has and we wanted her to know that we do take her complaint very seriously," said Edwards.

Flu season. B.C. upholds policy requiring health workers to wear masks

A British Columbia health-care workers union has lost its grievance against a provincial policy requiring members to get a flu shot or wear a mask during flu season — a development that may embolden other provinces to follow suit.

An arbitrator appointed by the provincial Labour Relations Board ruled the policy is reasonable, and a valid exercise of the employer's management rights.

"Health-care workers do not have to immunize; they have a choice to immunize or mask during the influenza season," Robert Diebolt wrote in his decision, dated Wednesday.

"As to the mask, I am unable to characterize it as an invasive procedure. The union also characterizes a mask as stigmatizing. I am unable to agree."

The ruling upholding the B.C. policy is being closely scrutinized by lawyers for the union that brought the action, the B.C. Health Sciences Association.

In coming days, the ruling will also be studied by public health authorities across the country, some of whom are mulling over adopting similar actions in their jurisdictions.

The chairman of the Council of Chief Medical Officers of Health, Dr. Robert Strang, said his provincial and territorial counterparts have been following the B.C. policy roll-out closely.

"I think today's events ... create the possibility of other jurisdictions — whether it's provinces or individual health authorities — now feeling they can move ahead in this area," Strang said from Halifax, where he is Nova Scotia's chief medical officer of health.

Senate

Reform plan ruled unconstitutional

The Harper government's most recent attempt at Senate reform has been declared unconstitutional in a stinging court ruling rendered Thursday.

The Quebec Court of Appeal has released an opinion that the federal government had no right, under Bill C-7, to create Senate elections and set term limits without seeking provincial approval.

It says the fathers of Confederation considered the role and function of the Senate in great detail, and the conditions they drew up were essential to uniting the provinces under one country.

"The transcript of the pre-confederation conferences shows that the founding fathers discussed the role and composition of the Senate at length," the 20-page ruling said.

"There is no doubt that this institution was a fundamental component of the federal compromise in 1867." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ongoing scandal shows deep rifts in Tory ranks

Getting nasty.

Debate continues to rage over bid to oust disgraced senators Duffy, Wallin and Brazeau — and now it's personal

The Harper government's bid for summary execution of senators Mike Duffy, Pamela Wallin and Patrick Brazeau has turned into an agonizingly slow soap opera that is exposing a nasty — and increasingly personal — family feud within the Conservative caucus.

Debate over government motions to suspend, without pay, the three erstwhile Conservatives continued to rage in the Senate for the third straight day — with no end in sight.

Thursday's debate saw Marjory LeBreton, former government leader in the Senate, fire back at Duffy for alleging she was part of a "monstrous" conspiracy to intimidate him into accepting a secret deal to pay back ineligible expenses or face being disqualified from sitting in the Senate.

She variously described Duffy's claims as "utterly preposterous," "blatant falsehood" and "stretching credibility."

And, although LeBreton didn't directly question Prime Minister Stephen Harper's judgment in appointing Duffy to the upper chamber, she revealed that she was never a fan of the former broadcast journalist, who hosted a daily show on federal politics until his elevation to the Senate in 2009.

"I sometimes found myself ... frustrated by his style of journalism, trading as he did, more often than not, on gossip and the latest hot rumour," LeBreton told the upper chamber.

"And sometimes I was so disgusted that I felt like put-

'We have very good due process'

Government Senate leader Claude Carignan admitted the debate over the suspension motions could drag on into next week. But he said that's proof that the three senators are getting a fair hearing.

- Duffy, Wallin and Brazeau have had the opportunity to spend "a very long time" to give their side of the story, and other senators are being allowed to freely air their views, Carignan said.

- "If somebody thinks we don't have due process here, sorry, but we have very good due process," Carignan added.

When anyone complained, Duffy would say, "It's showbiz," LeBreton said, implying that Duffy has taken the same approach to justifying his role in the Senate expenses scandal.

Couple who starved boy didn't concern aid worker, inquest hears

Margarita Quintana doesn't recall many details about the case of Jeffrey Baldwin, a five-year-old boy who starved to death at the hands of his grandparents 11 years ago.

But what the frontline children's aid worker does remember is that the boy's grandmother, Elva Bottineau, appeared at the time as a reliable pillar of support at the centre of a troubled family.

Speaking softly, with multiple pauses for thought, Quintana repeatedly told an inquest into Jeffrey's death Thursday she had no concerns about Bottineau, which was why she never carried out a records check on the grandparents.

"They were highly involved with the family. They were always concerned about the children," said Quintana, who's now retired from the Catholic Children's Aid Society.

The inquest has heard that both Bottineau and her partner Norman Kidman had a history of child abuse, including convictions and various dealings with the children's aid society.

But a lack of records checks meant children's aid workers didn't look through their own files to discover details of the pair's past until after Jeffrey's death.

Jeffrey was so severely starved at the end of his life that he couldn't lift his own head. He was just 21 pounds when he died in November, 2002 — about as much as he weighed on his first birthday.

The inquest has heard how Bottineau and Kidman kept Jeffrey and one of his sisters locked away in a cold, filthy room, where they were left to urinate and defecate and then forced to clean up their own mess.

But to Quintana, more than a decade ago Bottineau and Kidman appeared to present a better care alternative than Jeffrey's parents, who were described as a young "high-risk" pair who struggled with domestic violence issues.

Weekend campaign.

Activists hope that on Saturday police will crack down on men who harass women drivers

It's been a little more than two years since women in Saudi Arabia campaigned for the right to drive. Now activists are calling for women to get behind the wheel again Saturday, and they hope reforms made by the monarchy since then have readied the deeply conservative nation for change.

The reforms made by King Abdullah in recent years have been cautious, showing his wariness of pushing too hard against influential ultraconservatives.

Around 150 clerics rallied outside one of the king's palaces this week, some accusing Abdullah's top ally the United States of being behind calls to let women drive. A prominent cleric caused a stir when he said last month that medical studies show that driving a car harms a woman's ovaries. Those opposed to the campaign have also used social media to attack women activists or have urged people to harass female drivers.

The government has given mixed signals about how it will deal with the campaign, illustrated by a statement put out this week by the Interior Ministry, which is in charge of police.

Activists have interpreted the statement to mean that police will crack down on men who try and attack or harass women drivers, said Hatoun al-Fassi, a Women's History professor at King Saud University in Riyadh.

Nighttime curfew shortened

Egypt's government has decided to again shorten a nighttime curfew put in place over much of the country because of unrest after a coup that ousted the country's president.

In a statement Thursday, the Cabinet said the curfew will be from 1 a.m. to 5 a.m., six days a week. On Fridays, the Cabinet said the curfew will remain 10 hours, starting shortly after sunset. Friday is the start of the weekend in Egypt and has been a day of major protests since the 2011 uprising. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kenya. TV report on mall attack under fire by police

Kenyan police want to question two journalists and the chief executive of their media house over an investigative TV report which suggested that four terrorists may have escaped after killing 67 people in a Nairobi mall attack last month, an official said Thursday.

The move to question the journalists has been condemned by rights groups that say it is infringing on freedom of expression.

On Thursday George Ojuka, a senior criminal investigations officer, said he left summons at the offices of the Standard Group for journalists John-Allan Namu, Mohammed Ali and company CEO Sam Shollei to report to police for questioning.

Namu and Ali prepared an investigative report that aired last Friday accompanied by closed circuit television footage that appears to show Kenya army troops looting a store in the mall.

Namu said he thinks the police are issuing threats against journalists because the government is embarrassed about the allegation of looting by the Kenyan military "at a time the country needed them."

Barneys New York accused of racially profiling shoppers

Two black shoppers say they were stopped by police after making luxury purchases

Barneys department store says it has retained a civil rights expert to lead a review of its policies and has reached out to New York community leaders to start a dialogue after it was accused of racially profiling shoppers.

Two black customers say they were questioned by police after they made expensive purchases at the store in Manhattan. One of them has filed a discrimination lawsuit against Barneys, the city and its police department; the other has filed a complaint with the

According to a lawsuit filed on Monday, 19-year-old Trayon Christian purchased a $350 Ferragamo belt and was accosted by undercover officers after leaving. The lawsuit said he showed identification, the receipt and debit card from the purchase to the officers, but he was told the identification was false and

"that he could not afford to make such an expensive purchase." He was allegedly held in a precinct cell for more than two hours before being released with no charges filed. It said the incident was due to "discrimination based on plaintiff's race and age as he was a young black American male."

A second shopper, Kayla Phillips, 21, told the media Wednesday that she was surrounded by police after purchasing a $2,500 Celine handbag. They demanded to know why she used a debit card without a name on it, she said. Phillips explained it was a temporary card. After showing ID and a new debit card that had arrived in the mail, they let her go. She also intends to sue the police department. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chatty Pacific killer whales go quiet: Scientists

Vancouver Aquarium researchers are puzzled by changes seen in killer whale pods that live off British Columbia and Alaska.

Dr. Lance Barrett-Lennard says the resident pods have lost seven older females over the past two years, and he's noticed a lack of vocalizations from the normally chatty mammals.

The aquarium's cetacean research team says the whales were also seen the past two summers travelling in small groups, further offshore to find food — behaviour more typical in winter.

At the same time, the researcher says the number of the rarer Bigg's killer whales has been increasing over the past 25 years, and the two species are now spotted in almost equal measure. He says the changes are striking and need further study.

In them mean old cotton fields of Uzbekistan: Slavery

Threats, brutality. Uzbeks must perform national duty which the government defines as supporting the cotton harvest

In Uzbekistan, this time of the year is the cotton harvest. It is also a time fraught with peril.

One warm evening this month, Safarboy Karimov was at a public meeting in the western region of Karakalpakstan where he was humiliated by government officials for not picking enough cotton. At least one official said he would be better off hanging himself if he couldn't meet the quota.

A few days later, the father of four committed suicide. He was found hanging from a tree.

On Sept. 15, Amirbek Rakhmatov, 6, suffocated beneath a heap of raw cotton in the Bukhara region, also in western Uzbekistan. Amirbek had not gone to school that day. Instead, he went to a cotton field to help his mother, who had been "mobilized" by the government for the harvest. As she picked the white fluffy cotton balls, he climbed into a trailer and fell asleep. The other workers didn't notice the little boy and dumped raw cotton on top of him all day.

More than 130 apparel brands and retailers have pledged not to use Uzbek cotton.

Newtown. Demolition begins on building, site of deadly school shooting

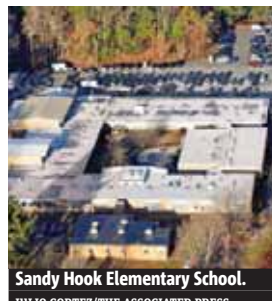

An official says the demolition has begun of the U.S. school where a gunman shot dead 20 young children and six adults in December.

The top elected leader in Newtown, Conn., Pat Llodra, said Thursday that the demolition of the old Sandy Hook Elementary School building will take several weeks. Contractors are being asked to destroy materials to eliminate nearly every trace of the building.

Student safety. UBC steps up safety measures after campus sex assaults

The University of British Columbia is putting extra safety measures in place following several sexual assaults on campus, but the response itself is stirring controversy weeks after scandal erupted over a frosh-week rape chant.

The university is holding emergency meetings to alert students and handing out whistles, and says it will install more lighting and step up its late-night Safewalk program after three reported assaults.

The institution is also running a series of ads on 100 buses that come to the campus warning female students not to walk alone.

An anonymous student responded with a series of unofficial posters warning males not to be rapists, saying a woman walking alone is not an invitation to assault.

Last month, the Sauder School of Business, where the first-year students involved in the chant attend class, was defaced with graffiti attacking UBC's "rape culture."

The school is also forming a group to look at the issue and report back with recommendations. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Are Schwarzman Scholars the new Rhodes Scholars?

Wall Street tycoon Stephen A. Schwarzman helped break ground Thursday on a college building in Beijing that will house a $300-million scholarship program bearing his name that is intended to rival the prestigious Rhodes Scholarships.

The founder of the private-equity firm Blackstone turned a shovel at an event at Tsinghua University.

The first class of Schwarzman Scholars will study there in 2016.

Loblaw joins Primark in paying out victims

Damage control. After deadly factory collapse in Bangladesh, where Joe Fresh produced clothes, company pledges to help workers and families

Grocery giant Loblaw Companies Ltd. says it will provide long-term financial assistance to the victims and families affected by a deadly factory collapse in Bangladesh in April.

The company said Thursday the compensation will go to those who worked at the New Wave Style factory, which produced clothing for Loblaw's

Stepping up

Joe Fresh clothing line. The company will also pay three months in wages to workers until the longer-term funds kick in.

The New Wave Style factory was one of five manufacturing plants in the Dhaka plaza that collapsed, killing more than 1,100 workers on April 24.

Loblaw did not disclose the total compensation amount.

In addition, the company has joined with British clothing retailer Primark to provide financial assistance to workers of all retailers in the factory plaza.

"Should the other brands not step forward and join in this funding, we will join Primark and immediately contribute to the payment of three months wages for the approximately 3,600 individuals involved, regardless of the brand apparel that was being produced in their workplace," said Bob Chant, Loblaw's senior vice-president of corporate affairs and communications.

The company has previously donated $1 million to Save the Children Bangladesh and the Centre for Rehabilitation of the Paralyzed, to help those in the country's garment industry.

This latest announcement marks the six-month anniversary of the deadly factory collapse, which has been called the industry's worst disaster.

Ann Levey: Invaluable innkeeper

For Metro

As someone who once had a brush with homelessness and who is propelled by a lifelong distaste for injustice, University of Calgary philosophy Prof. Ann Levey now reaches out to help families through Calgary's Inn From The Cold.

Levey said she and a friend arrived in Calgary as kids on an overnight bus with $20 and an expectation they would find jobs and an apartment that day, but "it didn't work out that way."

"We ended up with no place to go ... I remember being afraid to fall asleep," Levey said. "We were scared all the time and felt vulnerable."

"We ended up at the women's emergency shelter for about two weeks and I said at that time, some day, I'll pay this back."

Today, Levey is part of a contingent of volunteers who turn out the third weekend of each month to transform the gym at Kensington's Hillhurst United Church into a temporary homeless shelter.

The effort is part of Inn From The Cold's "Community Inn" program that helps families who can't be housed at its emergency family shelter in the Beltline. There are roughly 60 such temporary shelters that rotate through various locations across Calgary.

After stints as a host and helping with breakfast Levey is now an "innkeeper," helping organize as many as 25 volunteers as they set up cots, cook dinner and breakfast, and look after from 15 to 25 "guests" — often families with children — at the church overnight.

"I like to say the innkeeper role plays to my strengths — talking and eating," Levey said.

"She is an amazing volunteer and this team is lucky to have her," said Sadie Thomas, who co-ordinates the Community Inn program at Hillhurst and described Levey as "invaluable."

"Ann has a laid back manner that allows her to lead a team of ... volunteers with varying degrees of training through two days of tasks, all while creating and maintaining a warm comfortable atmosphere for our guests."

According to Levey, there are two ways people generally tend to deal with the suffering of others — they either ignore it or do something about it.

"I just strongly feel that people who are homeless get a really sh—y deal," Levey said.

University of Calgary Prof. Ann Levey is a committed volunteer with Inn From The Cold. CONTRIBUTED and wine writer Andrew Braithwaite, who chose the 10 finalists after eating out anonymously "night after night" for a month to make his decision, pointed to the geographic diversity, noting that last year's list was heavy on Toronto establishments.

"I thought it was an interesting trend this year that people were taking cuisines from other lands and resetting them in a Canadian context."

Bar Isabel, for example, "looks, feels and tastes vaguely Castilian but does far more than ape a menu straight out of Madrid," he wrote in his comments. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Illegal Eater. Musician takes turn as TV foodie

Former Barenaked Ladies front man Steven Page is trading his guitar for a fork in a new television series that looks at the shady world of food.

The show The Illegal Eater, which airs on the Travel and Escape channel Tuesdays, is an exploration of the slightly shady, just below board eateries in North American cities.

Page said when he was first approached about the show he thought it would be an opportunity to try television, while still staying close to something he cares about.

"I still identify as a musician," he said. "I am not a reporter. I am not a journalist. I am an entertainer and food is kind of my comfort zone outside of music, it is what I care about." RYAN TUMILTY/METRO

Synopsis

In Cormac 'No Country for Old Men' McCarthy's screenwriting debut, The Counselor, he tells a gritty story of a greedy lawyer (Michael Fassbender) in over his head after dipping his toe in the narcotics trade with drug lord Reiner (Javier Bardem) and his sociopath girlfriend Malkina (Cameron Diaz). When the deal — smuggling 625 kilos of cocaine from Mexico to Chicago — goes south, the counselor finds his life swirling out of control. Spiraling around this grim vortex are womanizing middle-man Westray (Brad Pitt), prison inmate Ruth (Rosie Perez) and the counselor's long-distance girlfriend Laura (Penélope Cruz).

Less talk, more action

The Counselor.
Existential speeches bog down a promising dark crime drama

Richard: Mark, The Counselor is the feel bad movie of the year. Bleak and hopeless, it's a crime drama that examines the reasons and consequences of crime instead of focusing on the crime itself. It's a stylish cautionary tale about the worst of human behaviour driven by greed, lust and hubris; a non-action, action movie where most of the fireworks are in McCarthy's dialogue. Luckily actors like Bardem, Pitt and Fassbender are there to keep the fuse lit. What did you make of it?

Mark: I'm convinced there's a decent movie embedded in this overstuffed, overwritten film. First, let's take out all the portentous, existential speeches delivered by even the most tangential characters. Then, we could cut about two-thirds of Michael Fassbender's pained reaction shots. He looks like he's got indigestion after being force-fed the script. Oh, and get rid of the opening soft-core scene between him and Penélope Cruz. Then, there might be a grimly sardonic movie on the order of No Country for Old Men. But as it is, I could only enjoy it for the acting, the scenery, and Bardem's collection of 80's Versace shirts.

RC: I liked it more than you, but only by one of Javier Bar-dem's crazy Brian Grazier hairs. Talky to the extreme, the entire movie is built around dialogue that sounds like it flowed from the hardest boiled crime writer out there, which I guess McCarthy is now that Elmore Leonard is working from his celestial typewriter. Catch phrases abound — "You don't know someone until you know what they want," for example — but it is wordy. Sometimes brilliantly so, but the pacing, particularly in the first hour, will be thought of as hypnotic by some, slow by others. My main disappointment was Diaz, who I didn't think could deliver the dialogue. You?

MB: Diaz was OK because she looked the part and that got her through some clunky line readings. But back to the script... the plot is revealed slowly, in layers, which will not be to everyone's liking. You just know you are in the company of some very bad people; you're just not sure why. This mysteriousness kept me interested for awhile; then I started counting the speaking parts and calculating the budget. Even at scale, it must have mounted up. And semi-famous actors keep showing up for only one scene, never to be seen again, like Ruben Blades. And Richard, was that John Leguizamo in an uncredited scene?

RC: Yes! It's cameo city!

MB: Fits right in with the movie's aesthetic of more is more.

Playing the Hollywood game well

Hailee Steinfeld. After an Oscar nom, True Grit actress has been choosing her roles wisely

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Since getting Hollywood's attention — and an Oscar nomination — for True Grit in 2010, 16-year-old Hailee Steinfeld has kept some impressive momentum going. This fall, she debuted Can a Song Save Your Life at the Toronto International Film Festival before seeing Romeo and Juliet hit theatres. Now she co-stars in the long-awaited film adaptation of the science-fiction novel Ender's Game.

It's still early in your career, but you're making some great choices.

There's really been no specific method in terms of picking roles or any of that. I find that everything that I've done has been so different from the last, and I think that's a reason why I love that and I'm attracted to certain roles. But it's a process that involves my agents and my parents, so there's a lot of filtering before it gets to me. It comes down to just sort of loving the idea and loving the whole story and wanting to be a part of it.

Hailee Steinfeld, left, stars in Ender's Game, which opens next Friday. CONTRIBUTED

You're also doing a lot of adaptations, which is becoming a common theme.
Yes! Which again is not necessarily intentional but really helpful. I always find it interesting when some actors don't read the book (something is based on) — which is starting to make more sense to me given the fact that you're given a script to make a movie, and it may or may not have anything to do with the book. I remember when I shot True Grit, the fact that it was a book and had been done before was huge for me and it helped me so much. And then with Romeo and Juliet and Ender's Game, it's just a couple hundred extra pages of knowledge.

With Ender's Game, some viewers seem to be looking for a love story between yours and Asa Butterfield's characters where there isn't one. Is that frustrating?

Yeah, right? I know. I think in some ways it's expected. But the beauty of the relationship is that there's no pressure in terms of liking each other or any of that.

They don't have to fall in love to trust each other. There doesn't have to be any of that. They have a really great friendship, which I think is really special. And again, they're in Battle School. People aren't secretly going out, there's none of that happening. There's no place to go, there's nothing to do, you're under strict rules and you're away from your family so all you really want is a friend.

Bad Grandpa

Director. Jeff Tremaine

Stars. Johnny Knoxville,
Jackson Nicoll

It's juvenile and tasteless but let's not pretend the stunts the Jackass team cook up aren't daring. In Bad Grandpa, Jackass mastermind Johnny Knoxville spins a narrative into the mix, playing a sex-obsessed octogenarian who teams up with his pre-pubescent grandson to pull provocative pranks on the unsuspecting public. Although the "story" ultimately suffers on behalf of the gags, Knoxville and young Jackson Nicoll are extraordinary, especially when they push buttons in a little miss princess pageant.

All is Lost

Director. J.C. Chandor

Stars. Robert Redford

Robert Redford plays a sailor on a solo yacht trip on the Indian Ocean. When his boat collides with an abandoned shipping container he must use all his resources to survive. The actor is in every frame of this film and although he only speaks a dozen or so lines, manages to create a compelling persona of a man hell bent on survival against increasingly difficult odds. All is Lost is more audacious than it is entertaining, but it showcases Redford's effortless star power. Alone and figuratively naked, he holds the screen for the entire 106 minutes.

What happens to actors in Vegas stays in Vegas (mostly)

Jerry Ferrara. Unless Robert De Niro beats you up. Then you can talk about it. The Entourage star chats about working in the desert

NED
Metro World News in Hollywood

Jerry Ferrara swears it's a coincidence that his post-Entourage acting career keeps bringing him back to Las Vegas — not that he's complaining. Ferrara hits the bachelor party circuit in Last Vegas and next spring's Think Like a Man Too. And he's starting to feel like a local.

You've got two movies coming up set in Las Vegas. How much more fun or more difficult is it to film there?

You know what? Look, Vegas is obviously a really fun place to spend your time. There is a big difference in going there for two or three days and then living there for two or three months. I don't know why the stars are kind of lining up and bringing me back there to work — not saying that I don't appreciate it. I love it, but it's just weird. It's a crazy experience to actually get used to a routine in Vegas — getting on the elevator at 5 a.m. to go to work when most people are coming home; going through a full day and then you kind of come home from work; you have some dinner and you're like, "Oh, I'm going to read a book or my script for tomorrow and go to sleep." I didn't experience that in my younger years, so it's weird. "I'm going to wake up and go for a run at 5 a.m. in the desert."

People do actually live there and work there.

Exactly! At one point I started saying to myself, "You know what? I could live here. I could see myself living here." There's definitely a lot to do, as long as you keep the gambling in check (laughs). You can have a nice little life over there.

In Last Vegas, you get laid out by Robert De Niro. Is it easier on your pride to take getting decked by a senior citizen when it's De Niro?

I don't think anybody — especially any guy who fancies himself as even being a little bit tough — wants to get beat up in a movie. But I can't think of a better person in the world — like if you literally gave me a choice and said, "Jerry, you're going to have to get knocked out in this movie. You can cast anyone you want to knock you out," De Niro would be the guy I would say. I'm pretty lucky in the sense that my first on-screen knockout punch is by Robert frigging De Niro.

Producer David V. Picker's new book talks about movies that made it and movies that didn't. ROB KIM/GETTY IMAGES

Shaken, stirred and written down

Picker, David Picker.

The man who brought James Bond to the big screen reveals how he succeeded and how he failed in his new book

MATT PRIGGE

Metro World News in New York City

Film exec David V. Picker doesn't have the flamboyance of a Robert Evans. But his track record is arguably even more staggering. As a producer, including a stint as president of United Artists in the '60s and '70s, he helped bring James Bond to the movies, as well as the Beatles and Woody Allen. His new book, Musts, Maybes and Nevers: A Book About the Movies, details his successes and occasional disasters over a lengthy career.

This is a largely positive book, though you do call Robert Altman an unprintable word.

Some of the people I dealt with I had enormous respect for and liked. Some of the people I had respect for and didn't like. Some of the people I dealt with I neither respected nor liked. It's the nature of the beast, but in the world of the arts, it's probably even more — how should I say? — more colourful.

Artists don't always have a strong business sense.

But many do. Even if they don't

What people are saying

- Woody Allen. "This is a close-up look at what made a great film studio great, by a man who was a truly vital part of that story."
- Steve Martin. "A forthright compendium of some of the most important films and film people of the late 20th century. David Picker is as compelling a memoirist as he is producer."

have good business sense, they understand that in order to get support for what they do, they have to deal with the financial reality. Some of them are very good and extremely caring, others — on both sides of the table — couldn't care less.

The cliché of the '60s and '70s was there was a greater creativity than there is now.

I'm not sure that's true. There was certainly great freedom, but I just saw two movies in the last few days that are fantastic, and they couldn't be further apart in economic content. You go see Gravity and you go see Nebraska, and you see two fabulous movies that couldn't be further apart in the economic risks involved and the potential gain involved. And yet both got made and are absolutely fabulous films.

You mention not only great, beloved films you were involved with, but also disasters. But some, like The Fugitive and Electra Glide in Blue, have come around to some retroactive acclaim. Even Ishtar has a cult following now.

Well, that doesn't make it good. I don't think Ishtar is a very good movie. The Fugitive Kind is a terrible picture. It just doesn't work. That's my opinion. Other people may think it's a classic of some kind. They're entitled to think that. ... The one thing about the arts is everybody comes away with their own opinions. Some people look at modern art and say it's just junk. Other people look at it and think it's fabulous and interesting.

You stress how hard it is to predict success in the movie business. Even James Bond — a British series starring a then-unknown — was risky. Every movie's a risk. I think making Dr. No for a million dollars wasn't a giant risk. The difficulty was getting the rights. Initially Ian Fleming wasn't going to sell them. Then he sold them to somebody who couldn't get it made. Then it (came) to us. One of the partners had a deal with Columbia, but Columbia didn't want to do it then. It's hard to look back today and say, "What do you mean they didn't want to do the first James Bond?" But they passed and I got it. There's no accounting for how those decisions are made, and ... it's water under the bridge.

What will Oscar bring this year?

Oscar season officially kicked off last month at the Toronto International Film Festival, and Hollywood has wasted no time pushing their awards favourites in theatres and at the remaining fall festivals, but most of the buzzed-about films have still yet to hit screens. That means it's time for one of the industry's favourite pastimes: rampant speculation. Here's where we think the nominations will land — assuming Martin Scorsese gets his Wolf of Wall Street ready in time.

NED EHRBAR

Best picture

For possibly the first year since the Academy expanded the big category to up to 10 nominations, it might actually be tough to pick just 10. But for us, it doesn't matter what other films get nods since 12 Years a Slave has it in the bag already.

- 12 Years a Slave — projected winner
- Gravity
- Dallas Buyers Club
- Nebraska
- Captain Phillips
- Wolf of Wall Street
- Inside Llewyn Davis
- American Hustle
- Secret Life of Walter Mitty

Best actor

We've already seen some fantastic performances this year, with more on the way, but the stars are aligned for Matthew McConaughey following a string of great, risky performances over the past two years leading up to his amazing work in Dallas Buyers Club.

- Matthew McConaughey, Dallas Buyers Club — projected winner
- Chiwetel Ejiofor, 12 Years a Slave
- Hugh Jackman, Prisoners
- Leonardo DiCaprio, Wolf of Wall Street
- Ben Stiller, Secret Life of Walter Mitty

Best actress

Sandra Bullock is an easy favourite for the nerve-racking Gravity, but we're hoping Academy voters have long enough memories to finally give Cate Blanchett her due for her work in Woody Allen's latest.

- Sandra Bullock, Gravity
- Cate Blanchett, Blue Jasmine — projected winner
- Judi Dench, Philomena
- Meryl Streep, August: Osage County
- Kate Winslet, Labor Day

Best supporting actor

Probably more crowded than any other category, we still can't imagine any supporting actor performance leaving as much of an impression as Michael Fassbender's electric, terrifying slave owner. Honourable mention to Jared Leto's transformative work in Dallas Buyers Club.

- Michael Fassbender, 12 Years a Slave — projected winner
- Jared Leto, Dallas Buyers Club
- Daniel Bruhl, Rush
- Christian Bale, American Hustle
- Tom Hanks, Saving Mr. Banks

Best supporting actress

This is the category where the Academy generally feels comfortable rewarding newcomers, and we hope that continues with Lupita Nyong'o for her startling debut in 12 Years a Slave.

- Lupita Nyong'o, 12 Years a Slave — projected winner
- Sarah Paulson, 12 Years a Slave
- Jennifer Lawrence, American Hustle
- Kristen Wiig, Secret Life of Walter Mitty
- Julia Roberts, August: Osage County

Best director

While we'd love a 12 Years a Slave sweep, Gravity was also an amazing film-going experience — and a four-year labour of love for Alfonso Cuarón. He should be rewarded for the achievement.

- Steve McQueen, 12 Years a Slave
- Alfonso Cuarón, Gravity — projected winner
- Ben Stiller, Secret Life of Walter Mitty
- David O. Russell, American Hustle
- Alexander Payne, Nebraska

Mystery solved: Sherlock will return to PBS in January

Sherlock, starring Benedict Cumberbatch, will return to public TV in January, keeping company on Sunday nights with the Downton Abbey crowd.

Season three of the modern Sherlock Holmes mystery series will begin Jan. 19, PBS said Wednesday. It was previously announced that the fourth season of Downton will begin Jan. 5.

The scheduling reflects PBS' new strategy of pairing dramas on Sunday, part of a broader effort to build "flow within a given night in our schedule," said Beth Hoppe, PBS' chief programming executive. Prime-time viewership on Sunday, home to primarily British dramas, grew 26 per cent last season with the new approach, Hoppe said, and Sherlock and Downton Abbey were seen as good partners.

Overall, PBS' prime-time ratings were up seven per cent last season compared to the year before, Hoppe said.

Downton Abbey, the hit drama about the lives and loves of landed gentry and their servants, will be preceded by a Dec. 1 special, Return to Downton Abbey. Hosted by Susan Sarandon, it will offer a look at past seasons and a peek at the one ahead.

As in the past, the drama's new season already is in progress on Britain's ITV. PBS has resisted timing the U.S. to the U.K. airings, saying the January debut works better for its schedule — a move that's allowed spoilers to cross the Atlantic.

But PBS relented with BBC's Sherlock, which is scheduled closer to its yet-to-be announced British airing, Hoppe said.

Dracula will air on Global. CONTRIBUTED

Giving the Dracula tale a new twist

Television. Creator of the new series, Cole Haddon, talks about re-imagining the Count and using a vampire to take on the one percenters

More gore, please

"Every time I tried to censor myself, I was told I didn't go far enough."

Cole Haddon, creator of the new Dracula series, on how network television will censor sexual content, but welcomes violence.

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Screenwriter and comic-book scribe Cole Haddon makes his first foray into network television with Dracula, a re-imagining that pits Bram Stoker's bloodsucker (Jonathan Rhys Meyers) against a super-rich Christian secret society in 19th-century London.

What's the process for finding a new way to work with a familiar property?

I think it always begins with the theme, which always seems to be something that's frustrating me about the world at the moment. I don't know if there's any reason to really go back to these stories unless you find ways to make them relevant to modern audiences. It's finding that thing that matters to me today, then finding a way to create conflict in the world with that, really.

You're using a very particular evil that's prevalent today. How did you land on that?

One of the challenges with Dracula is that he's a supernatural monster, and I do not have much faith myself. So wandering in the world of the supernatural isn't terribly exciting.

However, having a character born of some sort of supernatural damnation and pitting him against an organization that's founded on fundamentalist principles, that have incredibly crazy ideas about spreading their religion across the globe via holy war seemed very fascinating to me. It's the conflict between science and faith that exists in the world — at least in America — today.

They're not just fundamentalists, though. There's also the oil barons and the one percenters represented.

Well, the Order in this world is very much the forces of conservatism. It's religion that has absorbed capitalism and made it part of its religion in order to oppress the masses. It also allows me to comment on my disdain for fossil fuels.

When you're pitching this to a TV network, how much of that do you leave out?

It's astonishing, but to NBC's credit, whenever I talked about it they asked for more. I never felt censored by NBC in this regard, and at the end of the day just by virtue of editing and development some references have been left out, but it is very apparent that the villains of this world are the fundamentalists, and they have very specific ideas for what the 20th century should be, and I just happen to disagree with all of that.

It has to be a tricky thing to pull off, making the audience side with a vampire.

It was my initial hesitation. Because of the fact that he's a villain in the novel through and through, there's nothing to empathize with about him. He is a monster, so without a real motivation or a reason for audiences to connect to him, there was no reason to do it for me. That's why we had to find an origin story that made him a character you could in fact empathize with.

When you're writing a horror-based show for network TV, what's the self-censorship level?

Every time I tried to censor myself, I was told I didn't go far enough. That's the bizarre irony of network television, where we no longer can show the amount of skin that we did in 1994 when NYPD Blue was on the air, but if it comes to violence, the threshold is so much further down the line. So more often than not we got to do whatever we wanted in the gore factor.

Baldwin has been Seduced and Abandoned by the film industry

Interview. Alec talks about his new movie-biz documentary, and the 'fetid septic tank' of the business itself

In Seduced and Abandoned, Alec Baldwin and James Toback present a portrait of today's movie business and an elegy to what it once was. In person, Baldwin's even more candid, venting on tasteless studio executives, the pay for actors and the "fetid septic tank" of the movie business.

Baldwin and Toback knocked around the Cannes Film Festival last year, documenting the humbling process of Hollywood deal-making and trying to get financing for a film. Baldwin, whose movie career has largely taken a back seat to TV, calls making the film — a blitz of celebrity interviews

Alec Baldwin doesn't have a lot of nice things to say about the movie industry and worse, the industry types. GETTY IMAGES and yacht visits along the French Riviera — "one of the best times of my life."

Currently playing in select theatres before airing

Monday on HBO, the film is timely, coming amid a year of much debate about the state of moviemaking. In an interview, Baldwin had plenty to say on the subject.

Though you have several films in the works, you've suggested before that you may be done with the movies. Are you?

You wind up not having any faith in it, in terms of having a career at it. Everyone wants you to turn to a speech that Lucas and Spielberg gave — two very, very seasoned people in the business who talk about the business model of studio movies collapsing.

What I want to say is: The business model in terms of actors making a living at it is collapsing because you can't get paid to make a movie. Everybody does TV because you're not out there having to kill yourself to get an audience the way you do in the movie business.

Seduced and Abandoned comes at a time of great hand-wringing over the future of cinema.

It was tough financially. Then it was very tough financially. Then it was unbearable financially. And now it's unbearable financially and creatively. For the most part. There are exceptions. 12 Years a Slave. There are movies that come along that are wonderful films.

The movie Gravity is a box-office success. Captain Phillips is a good movie. There are good movies that come along. It just seems that the opportunity to make a good movie, if you do get to make one, takes an extraordinary amount of luck or an extraordinary amount of fortune.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Writing. LaBute comes Full Circle with TV series

Neil LaBute THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Neil LaBute is far from snobbish about making room for television in his portfolio of stage and film projects.

He directed two episodes of the AMC Western Hell on Wheels, wrote the 10-episode drama series Full Circle now showing on DirecTV and will write and direct a group of short films, also for DirecTV, planned for next year.

Full Circle, inspired by the oft-adapted early 20th-century play La Ronde, stretches the medium by limiting nearly all episodes to a restaurant setting and conversation between two people who are family, friends or perceived enemies. One character moves on to the next chapter, and so on, to stitch the chain together in the ensemble drama that includes Billy Campbell, Minka Kelly, Tom Felton, Keke Palmer, Davidorean and Kate Walsh.

LaBute's astringent perspective on relationships in In the Company of Men, The Shape of Things and other works has earned him a virtual tattoo of two other potent words, misanthrope and misogynist, but in a recent interview he was cheerfully game for questions and generous with his answers.

Why did you decide to write for TV?

As a writer, I've always been someone who did these one-offs. ... The idea for writing for characters even more than once was always appealing to me. ... What I love about television is how connected an audience becomes to those characters.

Critics and observers have said your characters aren't necessarily always — or even sometimes — lovable.

Or ever (laughs).

But TV depends on creating a bond between viewers and characters and, in this case, we're being asked to spend a couple meals in their company. How do you expect viewers to respond?

I think everyone has that in their family: Someone comes to Thanksgiving dinner and you say, "Oh, heavens, you didn't tell me he was coming." That's a little bit of life to me. ... I hope that whether someone on the show is difficult, or someone you don't necessarily want to throw your arms around, that you find them compelling, you find them interesting and you want to see what happens to them.

A recent CBC Music list of Canada's 25 greatest rappers positioned Shad at No. 2, behind only Maestro Fresh Wes and ahead of Toronto chart champion Drake. FRANK GUNN / THE CANADIAN PRESS

'What I do is pretty straight-ahead rap'

Project painstaking. Canadian rapper Shad increases 'degree of difficulty' on new LP Flying Colours Canadian rapper Shad wanted to drastically increase the "degree of difficulty" on his fourth album Flying Colours, crafting a densely musical, intensely personal statement of serious ambition. And yet it's an off-the-cuff moment on the record's most familiar-sounding track that has fans chattering.

The boom-bap throwback Stylin' is vintage Shad, though the pointed lyric in particular is perhaps not: "I got fans that say, 'Oh hey Shad, I hate rap but I like you!' / Well I hate that but I like you / Or at least I like that you like me, so I won't spite you / It's not your fault that you're a white dude that likes white music I like too / Just don't be surprised by my IQ."

The 31-year-old is often held aloft as a nutritious alternative

Consistently complex

Ambition is not a new feature to Shad's music, as his record shows.

- His 2005 debut When This is Over touched on the Rwandan genocide, and 2010's TSOL earned the rapper a surprise Juno Award triumph over Drake and cemented his reputation as one of the most talented rappers the country has ever produced.

to that "other" rap, a likable everyman whose knotty (but never naughty) rhymes tend to avoid such well-worn rap tropes as violence or bank-account bragging.

But he's not always comfortable with his status as Canadian rap's cerebral saviour, especially when a compliment simultaneously implies an insult toward his hip-hop peers.

"It can be a source of frustration," he said during a recent interview on the patio of a Toronto cafe. "The truth is, what I do is pretty straight-ahead rap. It's not like Gym Class Heroes or something like that where there's this obvious crossover appeal.

"I think to a great extent it's been awesome and a pleasant surprise throughout my whole career," he adds of the support he's received. "Even outside of music, it's like a faith in humanity thing, where you're like: 'Oh cool, people can listen really open-mindedly. It's not what they normally listen to but they listen closely with an intent to empathize.'"

"And then to some extent it's like, well, hopefully that will open your mind up to other music that I love, which has influenced me, and sometimes people are still closed off to that. And I think that's the frustration I was describing. I come from a tradition of people who do exactly this. I mean, I'm doing it in my own way, but it comes from a long tradition. I'm not really inventing it."

You Should Consider Having Sex with a Bearded Man/The Beards

This Australian band was scheduled to come to North America this fall, but members couldn't get their U.S. visas. The video has more than one million views on YouTube.

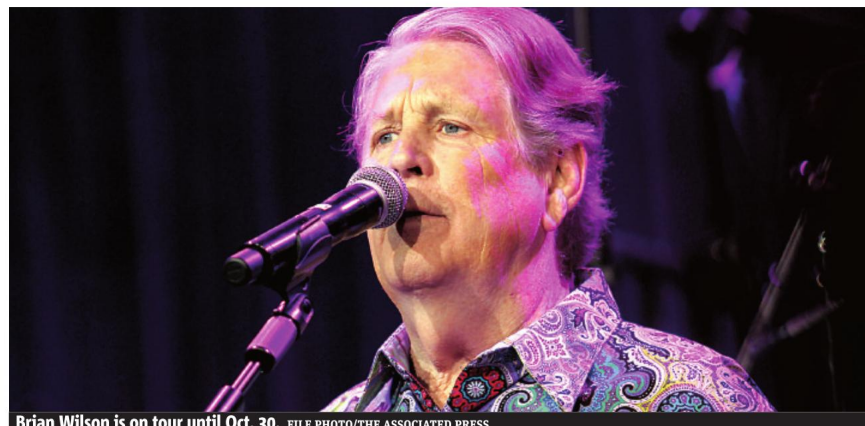

Young/Paper Kites

What kind of patience is required to make a music video out of 80,000 still images? This Australian group managed to make it through the daunting process. Amazing.

Autobiography (Page 1)/Peter Serafinowicz

The one in which a British comedian sings the first page of Morrissey's just-released autobiography (cleverly entitled, er, Autobiography) to the tune of the song William, It Was Really Nothing.

Brian Wilson is on tour until Oct. 30. FILE PHOTO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brian Wilson promising crafted tour performances

Music. Beach Boys founder, who is on tour with Jeff Beck, says he's gotten better over time

Brian Wilson says that with time, he's become a stronger performer.

"It's gotten better. We've had a little practice. ... The musicianship, the vocals have gotten better," he said.

Wilson is on a joint tour with Jeff Beck. It wraps Oct. 30 in Milwaukee.

Wilson, the 71-year-old singer/songwriter, even said he's improved since the Beach Boys' 50th anniversary tour last year.

"It was a very sentimental experience, but the vocals are even better now."

But Wilson wouldn't talk about the drama with Mike Love surrounding the band or what the future of the group entailed.

Wilson and Love, cousins and founding members of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame band the Beach Boys, have been embroiled in a series of divisive lawsuits.

Robert Pattinson and Kristen Stewart. ALL IMAGES GETTY

Are Pattinson and Stewart hooking up on the DL?

Maybe things aren't so over between Robert Pattinson and Kristen Stewart after all. The Twilight co-stars, who officially split up five months ago, have reportedly been seeing each other on the sly, according to Life & Style magazine. "They've always had a passion for each other, so even though the relationship didn't work out, they still hook up when they're in L.A.," a source says. "Rob doesn't see a future with Kristen at this point in time, but he likes to hook up with her. He's made it clear that they are not exclusive."

Question marks loom over Lohan's sobriety

Lindsay Lohan

Lindsay Lohan's behaviour over the past week has been raising eyebrows, leading skeptics to suspect the effects of her court-ordered 90-day rehab stint may have worn off, but her dad, Michael Lohan, insists all is well. "I've seen and speak to Lindsay constantly, and every time I do she is clear of mind, and by no means do I have any suspicion of her relapsing in any way," he tells Radar Online. "Maybe she goes out at night, but who doesn't? She's up in the morning and she's doing the right thing."

METRO DISH

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

50 Shades has its brand new Christian Grey: Jamie Dornan

Wait, Jamie who? Dornan.

Oh, from Game of Thrones?

No, from Once Upon a Time, that TV series with fairy tale characters. He played the Huntsman in the Enchanted Forest and Sheriff Graham in Storybrooke, the show's alternative universe.

Where else have I seen him?

Possibly Marie Antoinette, if you were one of the six people who saw that. Or from magazine ads. He was a Calvin Klein model and the face (and body) of Dior Homme. But British audiences know the 31-year-old as the serial killer on The Fall, a hit BBC series starring Gillian Anderson. And gossip fans know him as Keira Knightley's ex. They dated for two years.

So how'd he get cast as Christian Grey?

He has abs. He has experience (sexing up the lady mayor on Once). And he probably came cheap. Sons of Anarchy star Charlie Hunnam, who has a higher profile, was reportedly to be paid only $125,000 before he dropped out. Expect Dornan to get that or less.

Word is he's Northern Irish. Does he have a sexy accent?
A bit.

So is he single?

Alas, no. He's married to singer Amelia Warner, who records under the name Slow Moving Millie. They're expecting a child soon.

And does Twitter approve?

It's early. Fans are probably still busy Google Image-searching his name to form an opinion. But the popular @BieberSuperArmy account was among the first to weigh in with: "This will be Christian Grey, his name is Jamie Dornan, let's take a moment to thank God." METRO

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

For winemakers, fall is all about harvesting. Brewers, meanwhile, turn to the creation of limited edition craft ales — many of which take their names and flavour cues from the season.

Local brews are hotter than Hades, with their fans applying a reverence for their stylistic differences that's arguably surpassed only by those who appreciate fine wine.

What gives beer the edge when it comes to the "cool factor" is that consumer attitude regarding adding flavour elements to beer is much more open minded than those of their counterparts in the wine world.

That gives breweries carte blanche to add inspiration to their autumn ales, with many focusing on October's official gourd — the pumpkin.

The output of most small, regional breweries is sold close to home, so visit them, or hit your local retailer, to see what's being brewed in your own backyard.

Montreal's McAuslan Brewing's St-Ambroise Citrouille

The Great Pumpkin Ale (4 by 341 ml, $9.95 - $10.95) is available across the country.

Infused with cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg, clove and, of course, pumpkin, it balances its vegetal expression with an undercurrent of subtle spice.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

We all scream for scary treats

By the time you've carved an army of pumpkins, costumed your pint-sized ghouls and purchased bushels of candy, time for cooking up spooky grub may be in short supply. These treats don't require much time or energy so you can still do the Monster Mash.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/HALLOWEEN SPOOKTACULAR BY MATTHEW MEAD

Candied Apple Craniums

Wash and dry 6 apples. Insert large candy stick. Set aside. Place 12 ounces of white candy melts in heat-safe bowl. Set bowl over saucepan of simmering water. Stir until the candy has melted. Dunk each apple into candy melts, spooning up sides and over the top for an even coating. Set coated apples upright on waxed paper. Use a rolling pin to roll out Tootsie Rolls until flat. Use a paring knife to cut round eyes and a heart-shaped nose from the flattened Tootsie

Rolls. "Glue" the eyes and nose (mount the "heart" upside down) to the apples using piping gel or a bit of purchased frosting.

Vampire Doughnuts

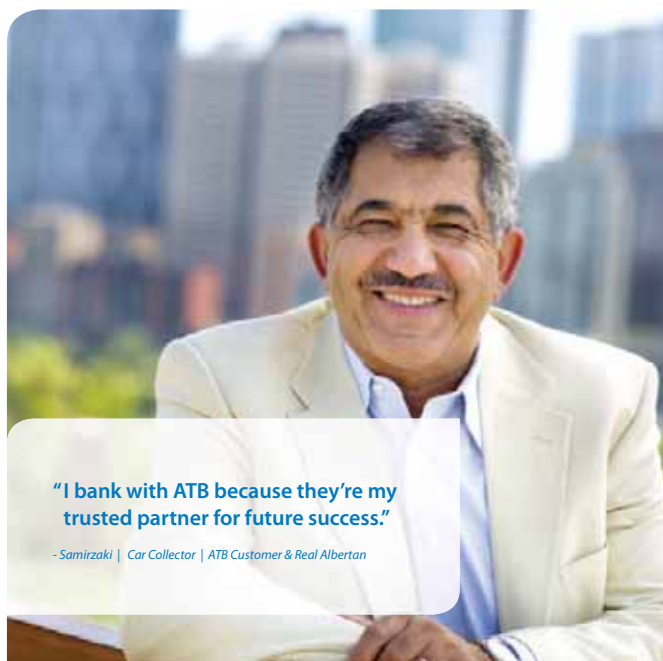

Arrange a stack of honey-glazed doughnuts on a large serving tray. Use bamboo skewer to poke two fang holes in top of each, then dribble red gel food coloring coming out of the holes and down the sides of the doughnuts.

Goblet Grave

Head to craft store and pick up a silicone skull and crossbones ice cube tray. Fill each cavity with plain Greek yogurt, then use offset spatula to smooth the tops and remove any excess yogurt from the tray. Freeze until solid (overnight is best). Let the cubes soften at room temperature for several minutes, then remove the ice cubes from the tray. Arrange cubes in a small bowl set over a larger bowl of crushed ice. Serve alongside goblets of grape juice.

Banff Film Festival

The Banff Mountain Film Festival begins on Saturday and runs until Saturday, Nov. 2. Get ready for nine days of stunning cinema with stories of adventure and wildlife like you've never seen before. Each year the festival has hosted world-famous authors, filmmakers, conservationists and explorers. This year, you'll want to check out screenings of films like Antarctic Adversaries and To the Ends of the Earth. Learn more at banffcentre.ca.

Chateau Fuisse Night at Market

For one night, Market Restaurant has the privilege of welcoming Philip Tuinder, a commercial director from Chateau Fuisse winery in Burgundy, France. Built around the 15th century, the winery has now been passed down within the Vincent family for more than five generations. On Monday, guests will have the opportunity to meet Tuinder. Executive chef Dave Bohati will prepare a four-course meal, each dish honouring a signature wine from the established winery. Tickets are $100. To book a reservation, call Market at 403-474-4414.

Official Calgary Elysian Night

On Tuesday, CRAFT Beer Market is hosting the Official Calgary Elysian Launch. Elysian is a craft brewery that operates out of Seattle known for making a range of IPAs, stouts, Pilsners and seasonal beers. Enjoy $4 pints of all Elysian products from 3 p.m. until close. Vote for which beer we put on tap: Immortal IPA or Loser Pale Ale. Make your reservation today by calling 403-514-2337. CRAFT Beer Market is located at 345 10th Ave. SW.

Things that go bump in the night

Did you know that Calgary has its very own ghost tours? It might be surprising to learn that Inglewood is one of the most haunted spots in town, and on Thursday, you have the chance to learn more about the ghosts that haunt this area. Be prepared for stories and historical accounts that will make the hair on the back of your neck stand up. You also have a second option, which is to join Rob Seguin from West Paranormal Research at 8:30 p.m. for a ghost hunt. Tours are $15. calgaryghosttours.com.

Festival Italiano

It's time for Festival Italiano! Celebrate the sounds and style of Italy with the Calgary Philharmonic Orchestra from Friday to Friday, Nov. 1. The festival will include movies, fashion shows and more. On Tuesday, come out to see Federico Fellini's Academy Award-winning film La Dolce Vita (The Sweet Life) at the Plaza. This 1960 classic depicts a journalist in Rome post-war and you might not know this, but the term paparazzi actually originated from this movie. The Plaza Theatre is located at 1133 Kensington Rd. SW. cpl-live.com.

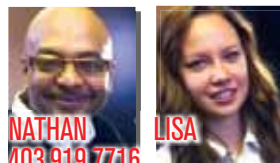

Brewmasters Dinner at the Libertine

On Thursday, the Libertine Public House is presenting the Fernie Brewing Co.'s Brewmasters Dinner. There will be four courses and each course will be paired with a Fernie Brewing Co. beer that best suits the flavours of the dish. The menu will feature scallops, rack of lamb and braised beef cheeks. To view the full menu, you can visit thelibertine.ca. The event begins at 6 p.m. For more information or tickets, call 403-265-3665.

Flames' fortunes fall apart in Lone Star State

NHL. Calgary falters from game's halfway point as Stars get blowout victory

Alex Chiasson and Jamie Benn each scored two goals to lead the Dallas Stars to a 5-1 victory over the Calgary Flames on Thursday night.

The game was tied 1-1 when Chiasson took a pass from Ray Whitney and shot the puck into the upper right corner over Calgary goalie Karri Ramo at 11:11 of the second period.

At first, the shot was ruled no goal, but a review showed that the puck reached the net before bouncing out.

In the next 1:01, Benn and Brenden Dillon added goals to put Dallas on top 4-1.

Stars goalie Kari Lehtonen returned after missing five games on injured reserve because of a leg injury. Dallas

Elsewhere on Thursday

- Canucks 3, Devils 2 (SO). Mike Santorelli scored the only goal in the shootout, and the Vancouver Canucks edged the New Jersey Devils 3-2.

- Predators 3, Jets 2 OT. Craig Smith scored at 4:43 of overtime to give the Nashville Predators a 3-2 win over the Winnipeg Jets.

- Canadiens 4, Ducks 1. Carey Price made 31 saves in the Montreal Canadiens' 4-1 victory over the Anaheim Ducks.

Sheets not running away from RB duel

Roughriders running back Kory Sheets speaks to reporters at Mosaic Stadium on Thursday. MARCO VIGLIOTTI/METRO

The Saskatchewan Roughriders head west Saturday night to face the league-leading Calgary Stampeders at McMahon Stadium in what could be the CFL's most high-profile regular-season matchup.

But in a game touted as a possible West Division final preview, most of the focus has been on the clash between the teams' running backs after Roughriders star Kory Sheets said this week that he's a superior talent to Stamps counterpart Jon Cornish.

"He's going to have a good game or I'm going to have a good game," Sheets said on Thursday at Mosaic Stadium about the rivalry between the two running backs, noting he isn't concerned with any reaction from Cornish, who has mostly remained mum.

"What they (the Stampeders) got going on over there is not going to affect me," he added. "I make sure I focus on here, I focus on the Saskatchewan Roughriders."

After snapping a four-game losing streak earlier this month, the Riders have won their last three games, including a 35-14 victory at home over the BC Lions last weekend.

The Stamps have kept pace, however, stringing together a four-game winning streak of their own.

Something has to give on Saturday in Calgary.

"It's going to be a big game," Riders head coach Corey Chamblin said of the matchup.

"Like I told the guys, I don't think I need to hype you up (to face the Stampeders)."

With a victory, the Riders could still catch the Stamps for first place in the West — if they beat Edmonton in their last regular-season game next weekend and Calgary falls to B.C. MARCO VIGLIOTTI/METRO IN REGINA

Cards double down on Red Sox to even World Series

MLB playoffs. St. Louis cleans up defensively and takes advantage of Boston miscues

Michael Wacha won again in October and the St. Louis Cardinals got just enough help from Boston, beating the Red Sox 4-2 Thursday night to tie the World Series at 1-all.

Down 2-1 after David Ortiz hit a two-run homer in the sixth, the Cardinals rallied for three runs in the seventh to end Boston's nine-game winning streak in the World Series that started with a sweep of St. Louis in 2004.

Matt Carpenter's tying sacrifice fly set off a chain of Red Sox misplays. Catcher Jarrod Saltalamacchia let the wide throw home skip off his glove, then pitcher Craig Breslow made a wild toss that wound up in the Fenway Park seats. Carlos Beltran folwith an RBI single.

Wacha improved to 4-0 this month, pretty impressive for any pitcher, let alone a 22-year-old rookie.

Trevor Rosenthal struck out the side in the ninth for a save. John Lackey took the loss.

Game 3 is Saturday night at Busch Stadium. Jake Peavy is set to start for Boston against Joe Kelly.

Wacha had already extended his scoreless streak to 18 2/3 innings — a record for a rookie in a single post-season — before Ortiz tagged him in the sixth.

A day after Ortiz homered after nearly hitting a grand slam earlier in an 8-1 romp, Big Papi connected for his fifth home run of this post-season and 17th of his career.

Dustin Pedroia drew a one-out walk and, with the Fenway Park crowd on its feet, Ortiz hit a full-count changeup over the wall in left-centre field edge.

Lackey worked around four hits in slowing the Cardinals. He pitched a day after turning 35 — it was his first Series start since 2002 when, as a rookie for the Angels, he beat Barry Bonds and San Francisco in Game 7.

Raptors extend contracts of Ross, Valanciunas

The Toronto Raptors have exercised the third-year team options on the entry-level contracts of centre Jonas Valanciunas and guard Terrence Ross, extending the deals through the 2014-15 season.

The Raptors had until next Thursday to exercise their option on both players.

The seven-foot, 257-pound Valanciunas joined the Raptors after being selected fifth overall in the 2011 NBA draft and spending the 2011-12 season playing overseas.

He was named to the 2012-13 NBA all-rookie second team after finishing the year ranked third among rookies in rebounds (6.0), blocks (1.26) and field goal percentage (.557). Valanciunas also ranked seventh among rookies averaging 8.9 points in 23.9 minutes.

A native of Utena, Lithuania, Valanciunas became the fifth rookie in franchise history to start on opening night.

Ross, a six-foot-seven, 197-pound forward, was selected eighth overall in the 2012 draft. Last season he posted averages of 6.4 points, 2.0 rebounds and 17.0 minutes in 73 games. He shot .332 (65-196) from beyond the arc and finished fifth among rookies in made three-pointers.

Manning back after injury scare

Fantasy football owners and Denver Broncos fans can rest easy: Peyton Manning is back.

Manning returned to practice Thursday after the Broncos held him out a day earlier because of a minor ankle injury he sustained in Denver's loss at Indianapolis last weekend.

It was his first skipped practice since joining the Broncos 19 months ago, the result of the pounding he took in his homecoming at Indianapolis last weekend along with the coaches' desire to give him a day's rest as the midpoint of the season approaches.

Jake Virtanen BRAD WATSON/CALGARY HITMEN/HO-THE CANADIAN PRESS

Climbing the rankings. Hitmen winger shooting for big draft year

Jake Virtanen is not recognizable to every Canadian junior hockey fan, but NHL scouts definitely know his name.

The 17-year-old Calgary Hitmen winger is expected to be among the top selections in next summer's NHL draft.

"I'd be very surprised if he wasn't," said Washington Capitals Western scout Terry Richardson. "In my opinion, he's a top 10, top 15 for sure. I don't get to see all the kids, of course, actually in Eastern Canada, but this kid's good. He's big. Strong. He's what everybody wants."

Virtanen, a New Westminster, B.C., native who grew up in the Fraser Valley communities of Langley and Abbotsford, is helping his cause this week, as he's a big reason why the Hitmen remain in first place in the WHL's Western Conference.

He has five goals in his last four games and recorded his first WHL hat trick in a 6-3 win over the Lethbridge Hurricanes on Sunday. With eight goals and four assists in 14 games, he continues to progress from a rookie season in which he generated 16 goals and 18 helpers.

"My 16-year-old season was pretty good," said Virtanen, who stands six-foot-one and weighs 210 pounds.

"I finished strong. I had a strong second half of the season. I get drafted this year, so (the draft) is in the back of my mind. It's obviously one of the biggest years of my life.

"So I'm really looking forward to (doing well) this season. It's a huge challenge for me."

Virtanen has not set any specific goals while he attempts to help the Hitmen reach the Memorial Cup, though he's hopeful for a chance to play for Canada's entry at the world junior tournament during the Christmas holidays. But he is eager to live up to his pre-draft billing.

NHL Central Scouting has listed him as a player to watch, ranking him among only seven WHL A-level skaters. Meanwhile, International Scouting Services has ranked him No. 4 on its list of top 2014 prospects.

Canmore's Crawford forging her own trail

Road to Sochi. Cross-country hopeful put distance between herself and national team to regain drive to train

Chandra Crawford made unusual, and some might say risky, decisions to extend her cross-country ski career.

Burned out, racing in pain and unable to find the speed she wanted, Crawford left the Canadian team in February before the racing season was over in Europe. She returned to her home in Canmore.

The 29-year-old saw two options ahead: retire or resume training with the national team when they returned to Canada.

Crawford believed neither would get her back on top of the Olympic podium where she'd stood in Turin in 2006, so she did neither.

Chandra Crawford has been training in Canmore, away from the national team, in the leadup to this winter's Olympics. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Instead, Crawford decided to train on her own in Canmore.

"Deciding to train on my own was actually a middle ground between not skiing and pursuing the Olympic year in the normal way as I have the last 14 years," Crawford said Thursday at Canmore Nordic Centre.

ford said Thursday at Canmore Nordic Centre.

"I wasn't happy with either of those. I found this middle ground that was a unique solution for where I'm coming from, with all this overtraining and all this energy stuff and where I want to go, which is the Olympic final on this great course in Sochi."

Crawford attributes her burnout to overtraining heading into the 2013-14 season, but also to the cumulative effect of travelling around the world, draining her tank in races and also training hard for those races for 14 years.

She's dealt with foot and lower-leg injuries since 2006, but has also won seven World Cup medals since then.

But Crawford has ample motivation to race in Sochi. The women's sprint final Feb. 11 is going to be a skate-ski race again as it was in 2006 when she won gold.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

You may wish that everything in your life was perfect but if it was, you would soon grow bored. With that in mind, don't get angry if little things go wrong today.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

If you have something important to say, say it now if you want your words to have impact. However, if you're critical of someone, they might be critical of you too.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

If you know what you want today, you will find a way to get it, even though you may have no idea how to get from here to there. Neptune, planet of imagination, will guide your thoughts and your footsteps.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Give yourself a break today, not least because the Sun in your fellow Water sign of Scorpio is going to bring remarkable new opportunities your way. The more rest you get now, the more you will accomplish later.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

The most important thing now is that you keep your enthusiasm level high. The planets warn that you may be tempted to take life a bit too easy and if you do then your plans will come to nothing.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

At times throughout the day you will wonder if you can believe what you see and hear. But, it's true: some people are behaving so badly you must have nothing to do with them.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You will only have time to act today. That applies especially to work and financial matters where you must follow your instincts — even if what they tell you seems strange.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Resist the urge to look back when you should be looking forward. The Sun in your sign means you can start anew, no matter how many issues are nagging at you from the past.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You may be concerned that you did not work hard enough to iron out a relationship problem and, yes, maybe that is true, but it's too late now. The chance will come again when the time is right. Stop worrying.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Why do people seem to think and speak and act in slow motion? Whatever the reason, you have to live in the same world, so try not to get uptight. Think of your blood pressure.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Your mind may be alive with possibilities but those around you seem dead to your good ideas. You don't need their help or approval. You can get where you need to be on your own.

Pisces

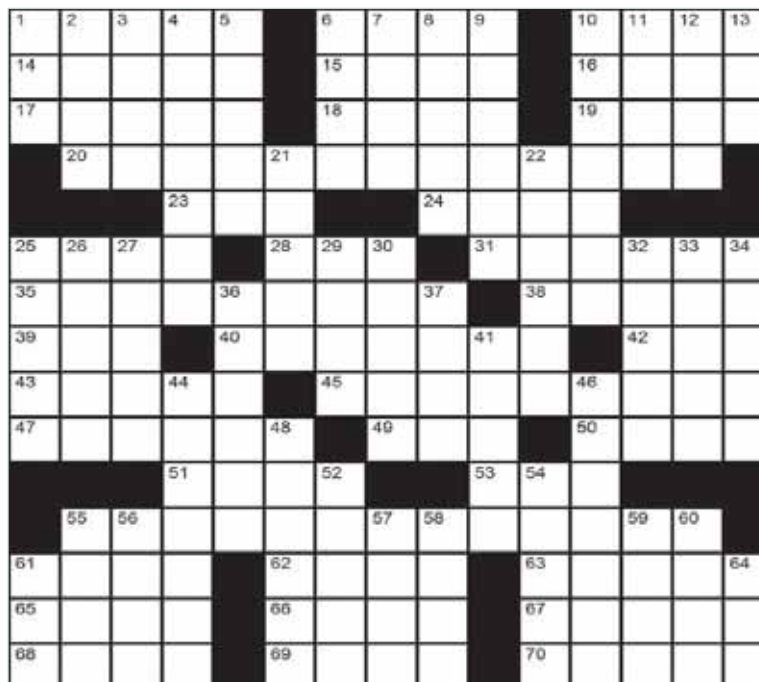

Feb. 20 - March 20

OK, so you made a mistake. The important question is: what did you learn from it? One thing, for sure, is that failure isn't as painful as you thought it would be. Pick yourself up, brush yourself off and keep going. SALLY BROMPTON

BECAUSE OF OUR EXPERIENCE WITH SUSTAINING CAPITAL, WE KNOW THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS A SMALL PROJECT.

Vista understands that smaller projects demand predictable, cost-effective, fit-for-purpose execution. We build our sustaining capital teams around these requirements so our clients can get the most out of their assets. Our people are adaptable, experienced and efficient – and they're experts in engineering small heavy oil projects.

Put our experience to work for your heavy oil project.
